

Our Power, Our Planet

The earth is not a trash can,
it is a home we share.

Every river, tree, and mountain
needs someone who will care.

We throw away so easily,
things we think are done.

But every bottle, bag, and wrapper
sits beneath the sun.

The oceans should not hold our waste,
the sky should not be gray.

The choices that we make right now
will shape a better day.

Recycle what you can today,
reduce what you throw out.

Because a cleaner, greener planet
is what life is all about.

We are not too small to matter,
we are not too young to try.

Every little action counts
beneath this shared blue sky.

This is our power.

This is our planet.

And it is time we treat it
like we actually planned it.