

Our Power, Our Planet , hear the call,
A shared responsibility for all.
In every child, a seed is sown,
To care for Earth as if it were our own.

We teach that waste is not the end,
But something we can choose to mend
A bottle reused, a paper reborn,
Less in the trash, less left to mourn.

The challenges rise in this modern age,
Polluted skies, a warming stage,
Yet hope is found in what we do,
In simple acts, in something new.

Across our schools, ideas grow,
From minds that question, learn, and show
That small solutions, bright and wise,
Can change the future we realize.

Reduce, recycle words with power,
A choice we make each day, each hour,
For in these actions, big and small,
We shape a world that serves us all.

Our planet's fate is ours to steer,
A truth each child deserves to hear
That through their hands, the future's planned
Our power lives within this land.
